

Fair Use Guidelines rating sheet. Attach a copy to every possible fair use of a copyrighted work.

	Against Fair Use				Favoring Fair Use
	1	2	3	4	5
Purpose or character of the use	Commercial, entertainment. Not crediting the author/owner	General Distribution (www or other)	Conferences, large educational gatherings	Local workshops, teacher education	Educational, classroom teaching, research, parody, criticism. Intranet or in-school use only
Nature of the copyrighted work	Highly Creative (Fiction, Artwork, Music, dance) Not published	Opinions, philosophy, found in one place	Non-fiction Published	Opinions, philosophy of several different authors	Just facts Parody
Amount of the work being used (see amount guidelines)	All or substantial/important portion			Appropriate amount for educational purpose	Small amount (see guidelines)
Effect on the market for the work	Charging above cost recovery, for profit. Illegally obtained copy.	Licensing is readily available. Numerous copies made. Repeated use. Distributed widely (www.)	Advertising or promoting the work (this right is reserved to the copyright holder.)	One or few copies made. No effect on market.	No charge and no licensing available after reasonable search. Legally obtained copy.

These are only guidelines in copyright law. Read the copyright law for more complete information.

If the average falls at 3 or above, you should be allowed to use a copyrighted item whether or not the owner of the copyright gives permission. In general, the last row is the most important in a court of law, but it does not trump the other categories.

It is always best to ask for permission whenever possible. Always credit the creator.

Compiled by George Pilling 2008. This is not copyrighted. It is a compilation of facts with some interpretation. Only the creative execution of an idea can be copyrighted,